PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

Greetings Fellow Anglers,

Today I've been sitting at my computer watching the rain pouring down outside and thinking about the fishing that we've had this year and the fishing plans for next year. This year has been a good one on the fishing front. Based on reports from club members and my own observations, 2016 has been a good fishing year. Anglers had many successful trips to our favorite waters such as Crane Prairie and Wickiup reservoirs and East and Lava lakes.

I'm looking forward to next year's fishing already. Planning is underway for club outings at South Twin, East and Hosmer lakes, the Williamson River and at some private waters such as Lake in the Dunes and Monroe Reservoir. Please let me or next year's President, Rynie, know if you have any suggestions for other outings.

It's already November, but there are some intrepid anglers who still have been out fishing recently. We had a good outing at Hosmer Lake in late October and the crew that traveled to Pyramid Lake hopefully had a great experience fishing on some new water. Steelhead fishing in the Deschutes River should be getting better as more fish arrive at the Trout Creek to Warm Springs reach.

Changes in fishing regulations for 2016 have resulted in most of the lakes being open year round. You'll now be able to fish waters that previously closed on October 31, as long as they are accessible. Some nearby lakes that come to mind are South Twin, East, Paulina, Big and Little Lava, and Little Cultus lakes. In past years, fishing at East Lake was often very good until it closed at the end of October. I hope you'll be able to do some exploring and that you'll try fishing these lakes into November. I'm expecting to hear some reports of remarkable fishing at this month's meeting.

The buzz saw shark, Helicoprion, roamed the seas about 290 million years ago. You can see the exhibit for this shark at the High Desert Museum through April 23, 2017.

Good fishing and exploring this month. Maybe you'll hook into a line cutter like this one.

Club Meetings

November 17

Nate Brumley, of Meridian, Idaho, will be the speaker for the Sunriver Anglers Club. The meeting will start early at 6:30pm with a Brumley fly tying demonstration. There will be a short business meeting at 7:00, followed by a multimedia presentation titled "Winter Fishing on Dry Flies."

Nate Brumley is a fly fisherman who wants to educate us to become better fly fishermen. He is the owner of dryflyinnovations.com, an online company that specializes in dry flies, fly-tying materials, books, and DVDs. An exciting and energetic speaker, Nate has fly fished for over forty years, always using a dry fly. There are no nymphs, streamers, or wet flies in his fly box. Our speaker has just released a new book on dry fly fishing titled "Addicted to the Rise" in which he discusses searcher flies, fishing outside of the hatch, and luring fish to the surface using flies that simulate a hatch. The book is truly multimedia as it includes still pictures, descriptions, and a DVD with 43 different video clips. The last chapter contains recipes for his top twelve dry fly patterns.

Nate's custom flies are all tied here in the United States by master fly tiers. He sells over one hundred seventy of his own original patterns, along with sets that are specifically chosen for specific rivers and lakes. On his website, there are sets available for many Oregon destinations, including the Crooked River.

Nate has a blog on his website in which he describes his days on the water fishing and talks about how to be patient and persistent. Also on his website are river reports about the water, weather, and size and pattern of fly that caught fish.

You won't want to miss this experienced, informative speaker!

December – no meeting as we have the Dec. 14 Holiday party as the Crosswater Club.

Club Outings

Hosmer Lake Outing Lives Again

The Hosmer Lake outing, which traditionally took place in the fall, was held again this year after a several year hiatus. Doug Vakoc and Marv Yoshinaka volunteered to lead this outing and serve as the cooks. This year's outing was held on October 26th when seven hardy individuals ventured to the cool waters of Hosmer Lake. The weather cooperated and we experienced mild temperatures, light winds, and only a little rain. Hosmer Lake in late October is totally different from the crowded conditions of summer when kayak and stand up paddleboard activities are in full swing. We found the lake and parking lot to be virtually deserted and had both areas to ourselves. No other boats were on the lake except for an Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife vessel that was being used to collect fish from sampling nets.

The hot dog and chili lunch was served piping hot and really hit the spot on this cool autumn day. Our resourceful cooks managed to prepare and serve the meal even though they forgot to bring a serving spoon and tongs. Doug's pencils served as chopsticks to turn and grab the hot dogs and drinking cups were serving spoon substitutes.

Although the fishing was not as fast as it has been at some of the previous Hosmer Lake outings, our group did catch some fish ranging in size from pan sized to about 20 inches. The fish were generally fat and feisty which bodes well for next year's fishing. We're already thinking about having an outing at Hosmer Lake in 2017.

Pyramid Lake Outing

In June, our speaker was Chris Wharton, who guides on Nevada's Pyramid Lake. He spoke of the Lahaton cutthroats that inhabit this lake ranging up to twenty five pounds. His talk and pictures were so motivating that close to a dozen Sunriver anglers traveled down to the lake.

Sunriver Angler's Fly Tying Corner
By: Phil Fischer

Callibaetis Biot Nymph

This past fly-fishing season wrought destruction on my fly boxes. Back in June, I had full boxes of flies lined up in neat tidy rows in each box. I had spent the previous winter prepping for the season by tying all those patterns that I knew would perform well on our Central Oregon lakes. Last May, I had every fly one might need for East Lake, Lava, Hosmer, Crane Prairie and others. But here in November the season is past. I am left with wonderful memories, pictures of nice fish caught, and the rubble that is now contained in my fly boxes. Everything comes around again and soon the snow will fly, meaning it must be time to once again reorganize flies and start tying for next season.

I inventoried flies and found I need to tie a bunch of those chironomids used early season on East Lake, the damsels for June on Crane Prairie and Lava, and the ants, beetles, and hoppers used mid-summer. But the most glaring hole in my fly boxes is Callibaetis. This is the single most important hatch on our lakes all summer. This year I fished Callibaetis on Hosmer during a memorable hatch in June and took some nice rainbows on dry flies. And on East Lake, virtually every trip featured Callibaetis, from drifting nymphs over the hump to sight casting cruising fish on the West shore, to the fabulous hatches and spinner falls during early July along the east beach just down from the resort. Even on Wickiup and Crane Prairie I ran into Callibaetis hatches. So here it is November and with my boxes in shambles, I'd better to get busy tying. Up first, Callibaetis.

For this month's pattern, I have chosen a Callibaetis nymph that is effective in advance of the hatch and often during the hatch when some of the larger fish take nymphs subsurface. It is a very effective fly on East Lake, Hosmer, Lava and others. This pattern features a unique blend of materials to make it fish effectively. I weight it slightly to get the fly to sink at a nice pace, but not too fast. I use a biot on the abdomen to simulate the segmentation on the natural and tie a rib over this biot wire for color and strength. The thorax features a dubbing blend that has UV (ultraviolet) fibers that seem to trigger a trout's instinct to take this fly. Lastly, the wingcase features barbs from a peacock eye feather. This is a natural flashback-like look, without adding flash.

Rainbow taken on a Callibaetis nymph at Hosmer Lake in June

Callibaetis mayfly hatches start occurring on local lakes in June and last through the summer and into early fall. Trout key on the nymph stage prior to and during the hatch. Fishing techniques for the Callibaetis Biot Nymph pattern varies, from fished beneath an indicator or wind drifted or stripped in short choppy pulls of your fly line to get the fly to lift and drop as you retrieve the pattern. I will often fish this nymph in tandem with a leech or wooly buggie when I am doing a strip retrieve. The larger fly might attract the fish, but they almost always take the Callibaetis nymph.

Callibaetis Biot Nymph Materials List:

Experiment with this pattern during the Callibaetis time at East Lake, or Lava, Hosmer or other favorite lake where Callibaetis thrive. If you have questions or would like additional information about the Callibaetis Biot Nymph pattern, please don't hesitate to email me. Or if you have suggestions on future patterns to feature in this column, I welcome your input. I can be reached at Philfischer@sbcglobal.net.
